

Participant Accountability should be more than tracking down participants to verify their activity.

It should focus on improving a client's personal responsibility so that they can effectively manage the program's requirements.

CHALLENGE

Do you find it difficult to consistently engage your participants and provide them with the advice, support and guidance they need to succeed?

Communicating with clients

Improving personal responsibility

Facilitating services

Does your agency have the tools to facilitate the appropriate levels of participant engagement and accountability to match their individual needs?

NEW APPROACH

INCREASED COMMUNICATION FOR IMPROVED OUTCOMES

On Average 2 Touch Points/Day

Smartphone-based accountability tools offer the ability to increase or decrease the number of daily contacts with participants as well as provide numerous engagement channels that align with varying degrees of accountability.

Participants share scheduling responsibilities

Direct access to support resources

Automated time management support

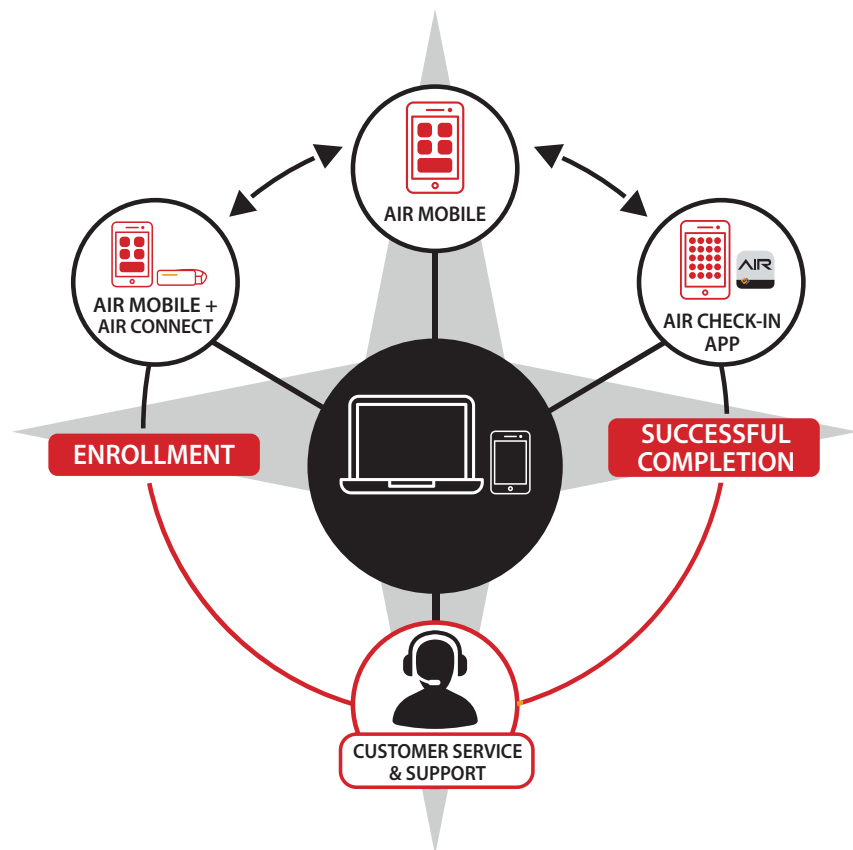

Eliminate contact barriers

Video conferencing for virtual client meetings

NEW APPROACH

The AIR Program offers multiple smartphone-based communication solutions that can be customized to best meet the needs of both the participants and the agency. Since all of the AIR solutions work on the same software management platform, agencies can leverage different tools to improve a client's personal responsibility without the use of jail sanctions.

- A customized smartphone with control features.
- A Bluetooth tether ensuring the phone is with the client at all times.
- A check-in app the client downloads to their personal phone.
- All solutions managed from the same web-based platform
- All participant data stored in one place
- Support services to address activity alerts
- Supervisor app for case management on-the-go
